LOCATION

Washington, DC: the Capital City

Washington, DC, is a globally connected city with countless personal and professional enrichment opportunities. From an expansive network of museums to internationally recognized monuments, there is always something exciting to do in the capital city. Located on the East Coast of the United States, DC is a short trip from many other major cities, all easily accessible from any of the region's three airports or by train. DC enjoys the benefits four distinct seasons—spring with cherry tree blossoms, warm summers, beautiful fall foliage, and mild winters.

A Laboratory for Learning

Washington, DC, is an iconic city, as well as a hub for business and innovation. Here, you will find exciting opportunities for internships and hands-on experience in your chosen field. AU students are mentored by top professionals and can network with our well-connected alumni while living in one of the best cities for job growth in the United States. Washington, DC, is also home to the federal government branches and hundreds of international embassies. The most influential global leaders meet here to discuss world-changing events and make policy decisions.

Putting Theory into Practice

More than 90 percent of undergraduates and 60 percent of graduate students take advantage of DC's unique internship opportunities, including assignments at government agencies, international nonprofits, media hubs, and major corporations.

DC Highlights

Visit the White House, home and office to the president of the United States.

Take a walk along the National Mall and see the famous monuments that celebrate the history of the United States and give Washington, DC, its character.

Tour one of the many museums that make up the Smithsonian Institute, a network of 19 galleries and museums, plus the National Zoological Park.

Change the World

American University's Center for Innovation Can Show You How

American University's Center for Innovation (AUCI) brings together students, business professionals, alumni, and more than 50 professors to nurture passionate students like you in developing the next leading start-up. AUCI provides the financial and professional support you need to build businesses that matter.

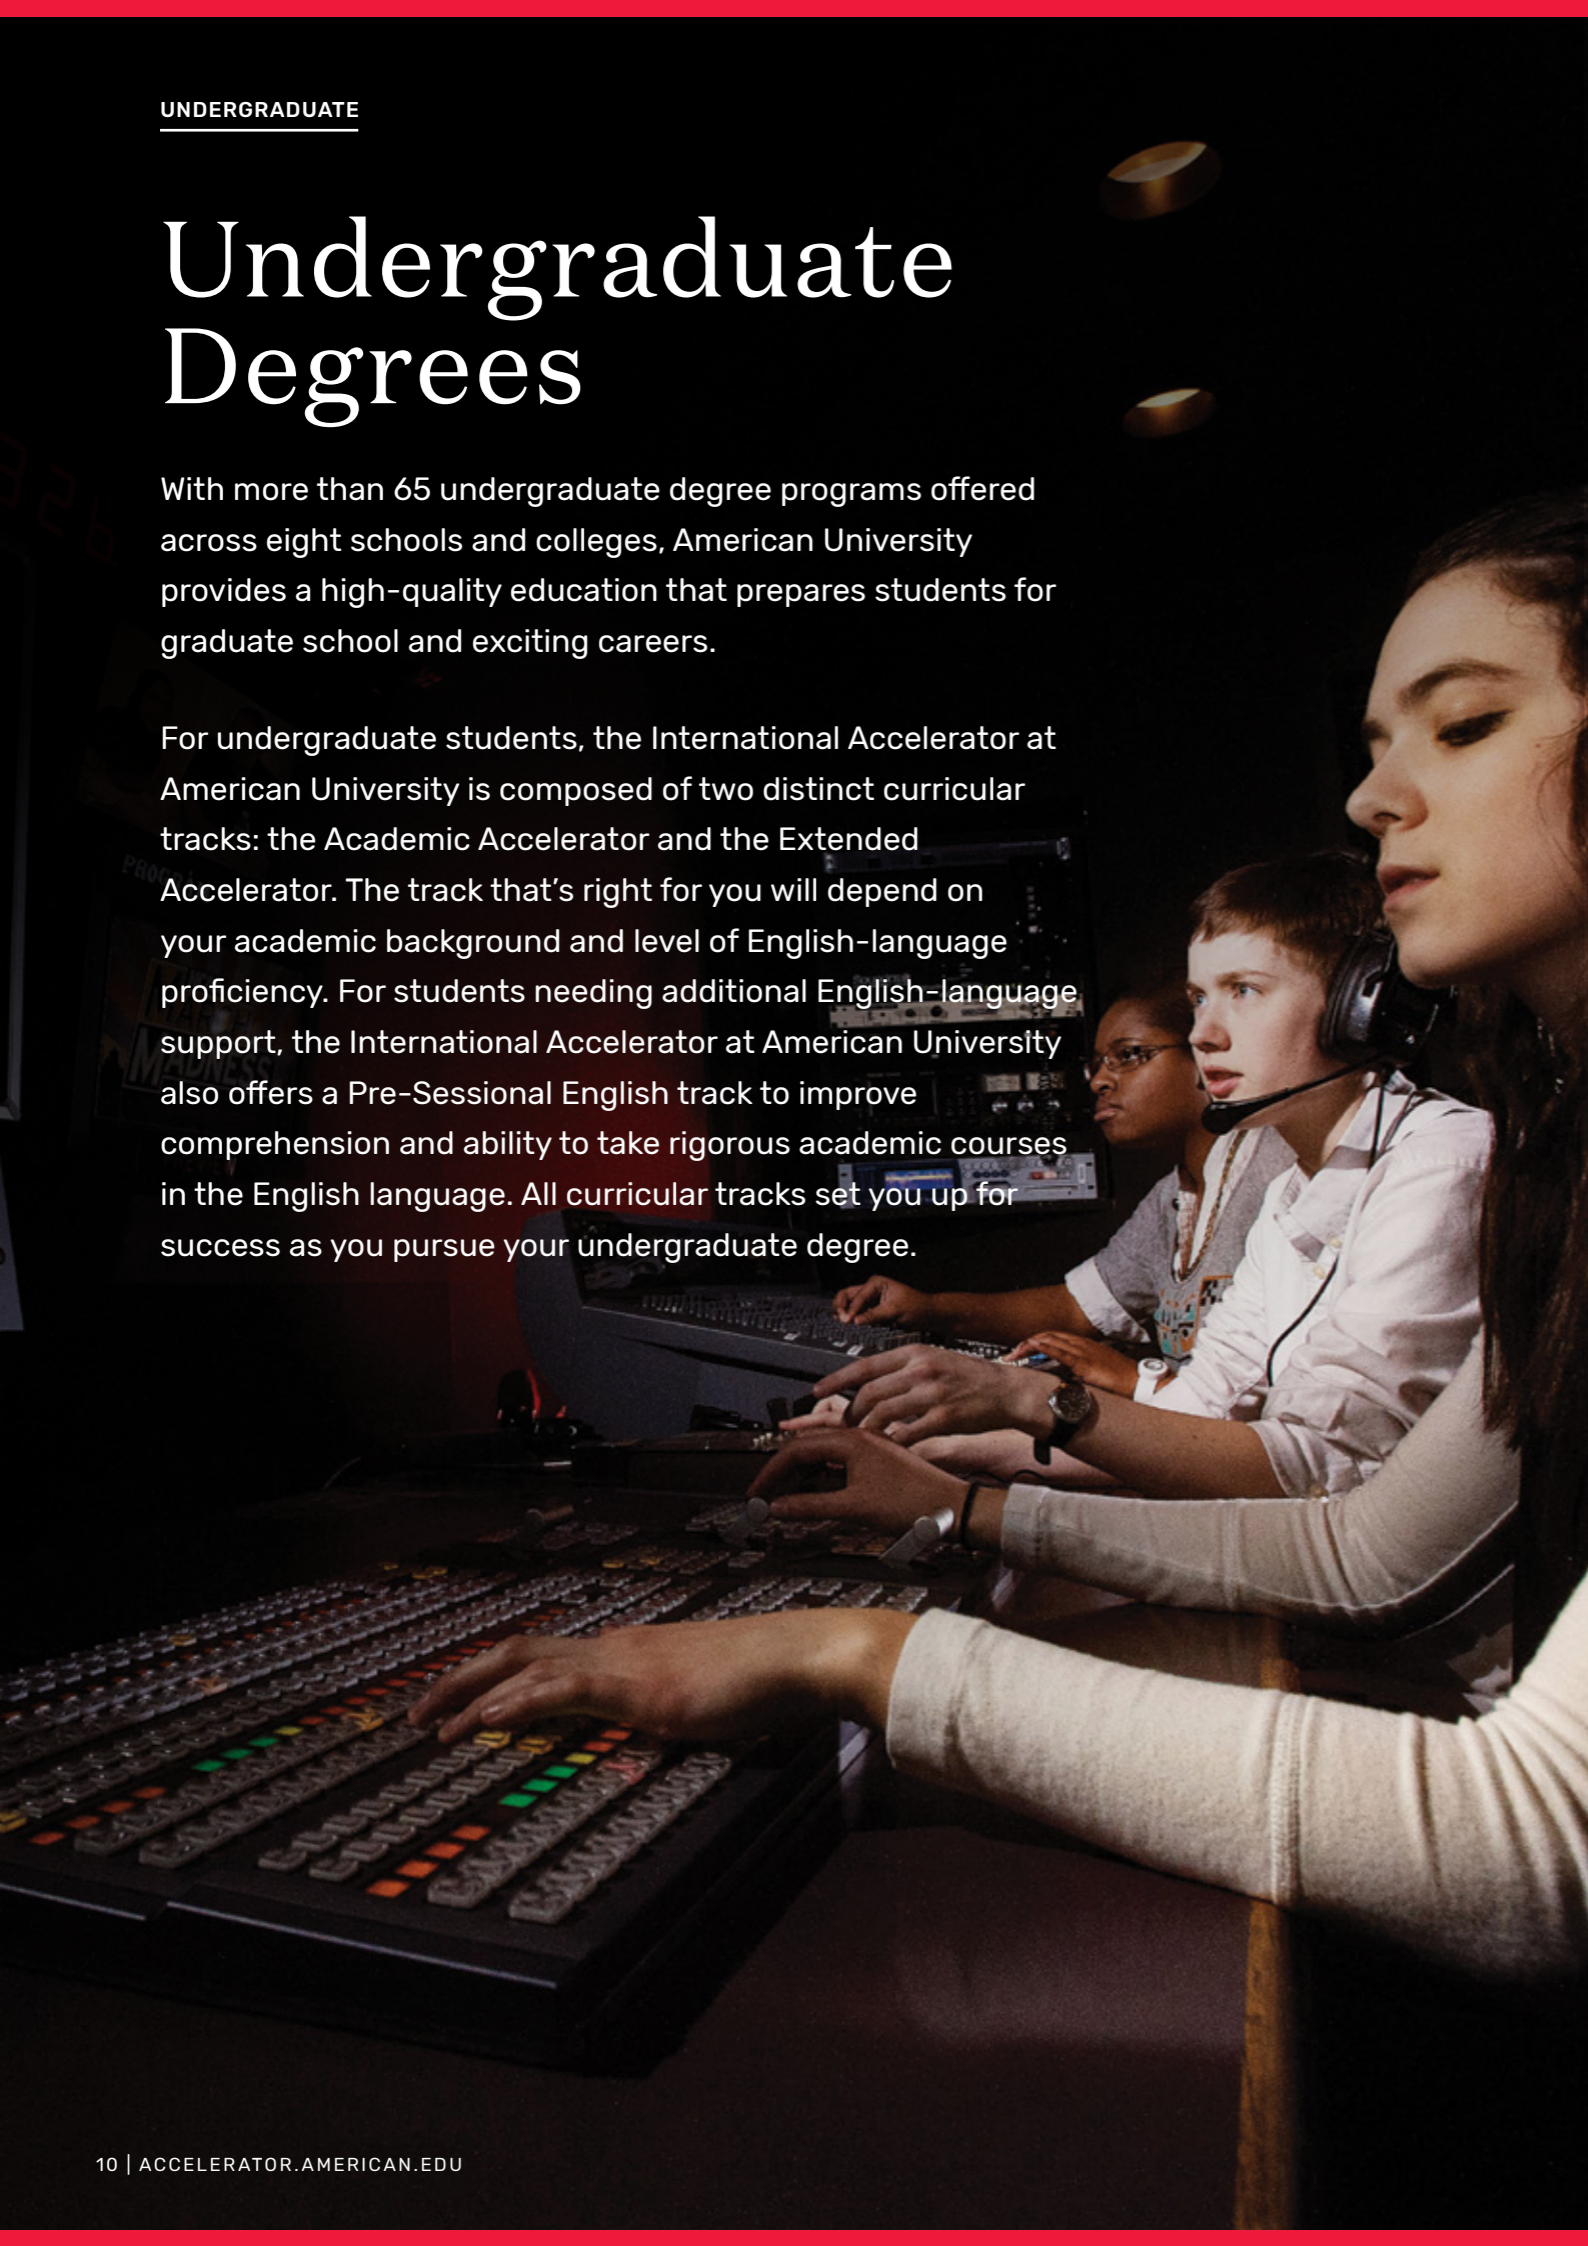

The Entrepreneurship Incubator, a key feature of AUCI, provides an innovative workspace; mentor, networking, and educational opportunities; and the technological resources to build successful student-driven for-profit and social entrepreneurial ventures. From the idea stage to investor pitches, we make your dream a reality.

Part of the Kogod School of Business, AUCI offers classes in entrepreneurialism to any AU student. Students in non-business majors can integrate their learning with the creative problem-solving skills of entrepreneurialism, finding innovative solutions to today's problems, while learning how to create business, nonprofit, and social ventures.

Undergraduate Degrees

“For international jobs, a U.S. degree shows that I have experience, even more than just having English-language ability. It was hard to argue or debate with other native students, but it is getting easier after one year in the International Accelerator. I love my Intercultural Understanding class. It makes it easier to join a different cultural environment. The professor brings us to different places to learn about cultures, such as restaurants, art shows, museums, and volunteering.”

Next-Level Learning at American University

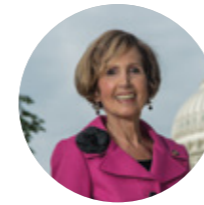

AU graduate students are innovators and intellectuals who are inspiring meaningful change in the world. Our programs—from business and communication to public affairs, sciences, and the arts—give you a broad range of academic options. Beyond the classroom, explore opportunities to deepen your experience through research and skill-building opportunities both on campus and around Washington, DC.

“If you study in a great city like DC, you have more opportunities to talk to native English speakers and learn about American culture and practice your speaking skills. In my classes, other students are helpful and patient and teach me professional knowledge. Every class at American University has a small size. The professors are all excellent. They are intelligent and graduated from good universities. They have high-quality education skills and knowledge about their fields. They are also patient, enthusiastic, and helpful.”
